

Macmillan To Bow Out

LONDON (AP) — Former Prime Minister Harold Macmillan announced Monday he is bowing out of Parliament because, "I really cannot undertake the full duties of a conscientious member."

Since stepping down as prime minister in October, Macmillan has devoted most of his time to his publishing business, making only a few appearances in Parliament. He resigned the top British office after undergoing a prostate gland operation.

His withdrawal from the next election ends a parliamentary career stretching back 40 years. He first entered the House of Commons as a member for Stockton-on-Tees in 1924.

White Students Plan Boycott

NOTASULGA, Ala. (AP) — White students may stage a boycott rather than face the prospect of desegregation at Notasulga High School.

Residents reported several white students picked up their books at the school Saturday, indicating they planned to stay away from classes.

Mayor James Rea said a mass walkout would prevent him from invoking the fire safety ordinance he used last Wednesday to keep six Negroes from entering the school. The ordinance sets a limit on attendance in the building.

Few Million For Water Distiller

WASHINGTON (AP) — A land-based distillation plant to make the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay permanently independent of Communist Cuba's fresh water supply probably can be built for a few million dollars.

The base, with its 10,000 military men and their dependents, uses about two million gallons of water daily.

Since Castro cut the water supply last week, the base has been rationing water, relying on huge storage tanks and a water tanker already anchored in the bay. Other tankers are en route.

U.S. Denies Secret Memo

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States said Sunday night "there is not and never has been" a secret agreement with Panama committing the United States to renegotiate the 1903 treaty under which it runs the Panama Canal.

A source had said earlier that Panamanian officials told the Inter-American Peace Committee last month that a memorandum signed secretly in 1962 committed the United States to renegotiate the canal treaty.

The source, a high Latin American official, said the memorandum was read to the committee just before the collapse of efforts to bring the United States and Panama to the conference table to settle differences that resulted in fatal violence Jan. 9.

2 Yanks Killed In Saigon Blast

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — Two U.S. servicemen were killed and more than 20 other Americans were wounded by two large Viet Cong bomb explosions Sunday night under the bleachers of a stadium here where a softball game was underway.

Three of the injured Americans were reported in serious condition. One American woman was reported among the score of injured. She was said to be a U.S. aid mission employee.

The blast demolished a section of the stadium's bleachers. Authorities believe the explosions were caused by two American-made 20-pound aerial fragmentation bombs, buried six inches deep under the bleachers, about 20 feet apart.

Oswald's Mom To Testify

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marguerite Oswald, mother of Lee Harvey Oswald, came to Washington on Sunday night to testify in behalf of her son "in the name of justice and the American way of life."

Mrs. Oswald, accompanied by a Secret Service agent, arrived by plane from Dallas, Tex. She will testify Monday before the Warren commission investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

She has repeatedly said that she did not believe her 24-year-old son fired the shots which killed Kennedy in Dallas last Nov. 22.

"I've had more than 1,500 letters protesting the way my son was tried in a few hours and convicted," Marguerite Oswald told reporters.

Stroudsburg Man Killed

STROUDSBURG — Ray Fellman, 28, of 1167 King St., Stroudsburg, died yesterday morning at 6:10 a.m. in the Monroe County General Hospital from injuries received when the car in which he was a passenger hit two utility poles at 540 N. 5th St., Stroudsburg at 4:08 a.m. Sunday.

According to the police report, Lowell R. Fellman, 29, of 1535 Elayne St., Bethlehem, brother of the victim, was driving north on 5th St. at a high rate of speed when the 1955 Ford station wagon he was driving failed to negotiate a curve.

The lone car struck two utility poles. The first pole, owned by the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania was undamaged; however, the second pole, owned by the Metropolitan Edison Co. was slightly damaged. The car was listed as a total loss.

Both of the men were taken by ambulance to the Monroe County General Hospital.

The brothers were examined by Dr. Frederick R. Jones, and Dr. Morton H. Spinner of East Stroudsburg. Ray Fellman, died at 6:10 a.m., from injuries sustained in the auto accident.

The driver is in Monroe County General Hospital where he is undergoing further examination. His condition was listed as fair yesterday.

Born in Emmaus, Pa., Ray Fellman was the son of Russell and Florence Dimmick Fellman.

He was employed by the E. R. Staples Construction Co. as a lineman. He was the leader of his own dance band, the Mark IV, which played local engagements.

Jobless Bill Poses Long, Hard Fight

HARRISBURG (AP) — The Scranton administration is braced to fight a "long, hard fight" on unemployment compensation, but feels confident its proposed reforms ultimately will gain legislative approval this year.

House Majority Leader Kenneth B. Lee was not so optimistic as administration aides, however.

The touchy subject of unemployment compensation is scheduled to be introduced in the Senate Tuesday shortly after a special session of the General Assembly convenes at noon.

In addition to the unemployment compensation reforms, Project 70, eminent domain, blind veterans pension and state nursing homes for senile elders are included on the special agenda. Scranton will address a joint session of the assembly at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday explaining his aims.

The speech will be carried on a statewide radio-television hookup.

It is the unemployment compensation proposals that figure to arouse the most heated debate.

A. James Reichley, Scranton's legislative secretary, acknowledged that the administration faces a rocky road to passage, but he predicted:

"I think most of the legislature will finally see the merits of the reform program."

Lee was more cautious in his outlook. He said it would take at least two-to-three months to pass the package, "if we can pass the bill at all."

Scranton's reform plan is expected to be basically the same as the one he introduced last year, but had to withdraw in the face of strong labor opposition.

It called for a $35 million reduction in benefit payments by tightening eligibility requirements and a $35 million increase in employer taxes.

Health Unit Asks Hike Of $4 Million

HARRISBURG (AP) — The Scranton administration was urged Saturday to allocate $4 million more for the state's mental health program in fiscal 1964-65.

The request came from Frederic D. Justin, president of Pennsylvania Mental Health, Inc., who said in a statement that no provisions apparently were made in the budget for mandated salary increases or other normal increased costs.

Justin simply contended that if the increase were not made, the state's 18 mental health hospitals would not be able to maintain their present standard of service.

The group also urged an increase in state funds to aid local psychiatric clinics and other community mental health projects.

Scranton has earmarked $81.1 million for operation of the mental hospitals in the coming fiscal year.

Strike-Plagued Railroad Struck By Dynamite Blast

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Saboteurs knocked out strike-plagued Florida East Coast Railway service to metropolitan Miami Sunday with a dynamite blast that de-railed a 91-car freight train.

A second blast across town, disabled the only FEC derrick car in south Florida.

Police were forced to close busy U.S. 1 in northern Miami at the scene of the derailment, only yards from the heavily traveled four-lane highway.

No injuries were reported as a result of the two explosions, but a free lance photographer, Albert Nitti, 22, of Miami, received severe electric burns on the left hip and thigh when he touched an object in contact with a fallen power line.

Damage was estimated at more than a quarter million dollars by W. L. Thornton, FEC chief operating officer.

Officers estimated U.S. 1 would reopen Monday, but said the FEC's north and south tracks might be blocked for three days.

FBI agents, city, county and railroad detectives were investigating.

"The violence was the latest—and most damaging—in a series of acts against the railroad since 11 nonoperating employees unions went on strike Jan. 23, 1963.

"This was definitely sabotage," said Thornton. "Fortunately no one was hurt. This is the worst since the strike began. I am not implying the unions are to blame. No one knows at this time who did this."

The first blast rocked the southbound freight just before 2 a.m. as it crossed a 15-foot trestle spanning a small tidal creek. It was touched off under the wheels of the lead diesel.

The four diesel units cleared the bridge, then plunged off the rails as they slid along, dug themselves as much as three feet into the dirt and gravel roadbed.

Thirty-three freight cars behind the locomotive were derailed and most of these were piled up in a twisted, precariously balanced heap in the stream bed.

Fire broke out immediately after the explosion and flames destroyed most of the 33 cars.

Barry Would Use Warships To Halt Anglo-Cuban Trade

Urges Exiles Invade Fidel's Cuba Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said Sunday he would use U.S. warships to halt shipment of British buses and French products to Communist Cuba. And he advocated another exile invasion of the island.

Goldwater, who is seeking the Republican presidential nomination, repeated his belief that the United States should have sent Marines from Guantanamo into Cuba to restore water service to the big U.S. naval base after it was shut off last week by Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

If this were done, the Arizona conservative said on ABC's radio-television program "Issues and Answers," "it might lead to some shooting in Cuba. That's all."

Reds Promised Aid

The Soviet Union has promised to assist Cuba if the Communist island is attacked.

Goldwater said he understands the United States still is maintaining a blockade of Cuba but, "It is not an effective one. Our allies are leaving us to do business with Cuba."

Asked if he would use U.S. power to stop commercial shipments, Goldwater replied, "I would."

Warships Recommended

This question-and-answer exchange then followed: Q. "Well, you would use American warships to stop the shipment of British buses, for example?"

A. "Yes." Q. "And French products?" A. "Anything that is going in there that they can use to maintain communism and to spread it through this hemisphere, I think we should stop."

"Now this isn't a military problem to us right now, nor will Cuba, I think, ever become a military problem."

Earlier, Goldwater was asked if he thought sending Marines out of Guantanamo into Cuba to restore water service could have been regarded as an opportunity to get rid of Castro. He replied, "It could be used that way."

But he went on to outline his views on getting rid of Castro this way: "I don't think we have to use our forces to get rid of communism in Cuba. I never have believed so. I believe what President John F. Kennedy did at the Bay of Pigs was right in its concept, but wrong in not following through. Not that the 1,200 men would have ended the Communist problems in Cuba themselves but through sabotage etc., I think that by now we would have a different picture down there."

Raps McNamara

The senator said testimony last week by Secretary of defense Robert S. McNamara did not answer Goldwater's earlier assertion that U.S. intercontinental missiles can not be regarded as dependable.

Goldwater attacked particularly McNamara's estimate that, overall, he regards the missile striking force as probably more effective and dependable than bomber attacks. The senator said, "I don't know how anybody can make a statement about an untested weapon against a weapon tested hundreds of thousands of times as he did."

Goldwater said McNamara's estimates were challenged by Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, Air Force chief of staff and longtime champion of the manned bomber, in testimony before the House Armed Services Committee.

But, Goldwater added: "You gentlemen of the press know that the committee immediately hushed this testimony up."

Eyewitness Saw Oswald Shoot JFK

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — An eyewitness to the shooting of President Kennedy can positively identify Lee Harvey Oswald as the assassin, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported in a copyright story Sunday.

The witness, the Star-Telegram source said, is a Negro janitor, then employed by the Texas School Book Depository, who was on the sixth floor on Nov. 22.

The janitor has been held in protective custody since that day and soon will be taken to Washington to testify before the Warren Commission.

The witness' story, as reported by the source, is this:

He was looking out a window at the presidential motorcade when he heard a shot, very loud and close. Jumping back, he saw Oswald at the next window, kneeling, with a rifle aimed at the street below.

The man said he turned and ran to a spot near the door leading to the stairway, where some empty crates were piled, and crouched behind them.

"I was scared to death," he was quoted as saying. "I thought he was going to kill me, too."

The witness said the second shot was fired as he was running toward the crates and the third after he had hidden behind them. Then, he said, Oswald ran out the door.

"He almost stepped on me when he went past," the janitor is reported to have told officers.

The man, described as in his thirties, waited a few minutes, then fled the building and surrendered.

"Police slapped a vagrancy charge on him so he could be held," the source said. "He was jailed in Dallas but since has been moved elsewhere. I do not know the new location."

Irene Wants Mate Not Dutch Throne

THE HAGUE, the Netherlands (AP) — Princess Irene and her fiancé, Prince Carlos de Borbon y Parma, relaxed in the privacy of the royal palace Sunday night.

A wave of satisfaction spread through Holland over her decision to give up her rights to the throne rather than jeopardize the monarchy.

The decision was forced on her Saturday night. She met the issue, decided in favor of love and life abroad. If she had not reached this decision, the coalition government would have quit.

Political Repercussions

The solution was found after a five-hour crisis session which ended shortly before 3 a.m. Irene, Don Carlos, Queen Juliana, Prince Consort Bernhard, Crown Princess Beatrix and Princess Margriet then had an engagement party. That broke up around 6 a.m.

The royal crisis was on every tongue. The Dutch by the millions hung onto the radio for any news.

Stand Before Gates

There were no Sunday papers in Holland. There never are but word of mouth news encouraged thousands to stand before the palace gates all day long.

Irene and Carlos, radiantly happy, broke their seclusion in late afternoon for a 20-minute session before cameras in the palace gardens. Then they strolled 200 yards to the gates, greeted the throng and inspired rousing cheers.

One well-qualified source said: "Irene then was under pressure from Beatrix and also Princess Margriet to step aside."

Threatens Resignation

Margriet told Queen Juliana a demand for approval, preserving Irene's right of accession as next to Crown Princess Beatrix, would compel his Cabinet to resign.

This struck Beatrix as a threat to the throne she will inherit one day, palace informants said.

For Money To Bury Her

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Mrs. Irene Angelina Grant will be buried Tuesday—17 days after her death—in the manner and place her family want.

Since her death on Jan. 23, Mrs. Grant's body has lain in a funeral home because the family couldn't raise the $315 down payment on the $613 bill.

But all that changed Sunday, after a newspaper story told of the plight of Ollie Grant and his 10 children.

Money poured in all day—at the Grant home, at the Ruskin Heights Baptist Church and at the Weillert Funeral Home.

There is more than enough, but Blaine Weillert, owner of the mortuary, doesn't want it.

Weillert had a conference with the Rev. Loren Goings of the Ruskin church and two other men.

"They asked me what my expenses were and we figured it at $350," Weillert said. "I told them I wanted to do it for nothing now, but they said it would be better if they paid, since all the money had come in."

"I agreed to go along. But I don't have to cash the check, do I?"

Grant, 67, is listed as totally disabled by the state. He gets $361 a month in Social Security, a World War I pension and

The government promised to explain the issue and the solution to Parliament on Tuesday.

The report will outline the Cabinet's firm stand which compelled Queen Juliana, Prince Bernhard and the engaged couple to accept a hard constitutional fact.

On The Line

Prime Minister Victor Marijnen laid it on the line Saturday night. He is reported to have told the royal family there was no guarantee Parliament would approve the marriage. Opposition centered on Irene's recent, secret conversion to Catholicism and Carlos' political position as a controversial claimant to the Spanish throne. The constitution forbids any member of the royal family, even in-laws, engaging in "foreign politics."

Carlos had not, and apparently would not, give up his position as the leading figure in the Carlist wing of Spanish royalty.

"We take care of the poor," Weillert said. "To do that, we work on very low margins. We must have our money, or we would have to pass on the cost to others and that wouldn't be fair."

"We had one service for $185 we wanted to give the Grants. But they made up their mind they wanted this particular service. We tried to discourage this, but there is no way you can dictate that."

So You Think You Know People?

EDITOR'S NOTE — What do we really know about the behavior of human beings? Here are some of the scientific findings included in a massive inventory published Sunday that may surprise or shock you—or just confirm what you suspected all along.

By JOY MILLER
AP Women's Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Did you know that:

The general pattern of sexual behavior is pretty well established in men by age 16—later for women—and by the time of marriage most men already have passed the peak of their sexual capacity, which occurs in late adolescence.

The death penalty does not appear to influence the rate of homicide.

Prejudice and discrimination are not innate but are learned, usually within the family and often, without conscious intent.

Over the past century in this country there has been no increase in the incidence of psychogenic behavior up to age 50, at least as indicated by rates of hospitalization.

These are among the 1,045 general conclusions two behavioral scientists have listed in a book, "Human Behavior: An Inventory of Scientific Findings," published Sunday. They were sifted from research studies, polls and experiments reported by scholars and scientists over the last 75 years.

Massive Study

The men who conducted the massive inventory are Bernard Berelson, vice president of the Population Council and formerly a faculty member of Chicago and Columbia universities and director of the behavioral science program of the Ford Foundation, and Gary A. Steiner, associate professor of psychology in the graduate school of business at the University of Chicago.

Relatively little of what most people strive for most of the time is necessary for sheer survival, the researchers found. This is especially true in an affluent society such as ours. In fact, what many people want and do not only seems unrelated but even detrimental to their physical welfare—such as smoking, drinking alcoholic beverages, dieting for appearance.

By and large children develop in the sequence—such as crawl before run—although not at the same rate.

The faster child is likely to retain the advantage. There is no evidence that slower children are likely to catch up at a later date. Children who are taller or smarter or better at a variety of skills are likely to remain superior. And there's nothing to the belief that exceptionally bright children are likely to be handicapped in physical health or personality or social adjustment.

Male Vs Female

One popular impression confirmed in the inventory findings has to do with the differences between men and women—and certainly few men will dispute it. Its that generally speaking, on intelligence tests "males are usually superior in mathematical reasoning, judgment and manipulation of spatial relationships and mechanical aptitude, while females exceed males in vocabulary, verbal fluency and straight memory."

Marriage, it seems, exists in every known human society. Prenatal sexual relations are allowed in a majority of human societies, but extramarital relations are almost universally condemned.

Lost Article A Wife?

HARRISBURG (UPI)—Among the "articles of value" left last year in service station restaurants along the Pennsylvania Turnpike: Hats, rings, baby spoons, sunglasses, clothing — and one wife.

The turnpike commission tells the "lost wife" story this way: A couple stopped at a service station near Harrisburg. After getting a cup of coffee, the man jumped into his car and drove off. He discovered his wife was missing when he got to Bedford. He telephoned back to the restaurant manager, who arranged for the wife to take a bus to Bedford.

When she arrived, the husband complained about the cost of the bus fare.

Students Pocket Parking Fees

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Four University of Pennsylvania students were disciplined for keeping money collected on University-owned parking lots, Robert F. Longley, dean of men disclosed Friday.

One student, a senior in the Wharton School of Business Administration, was suspended, effective immediately, for one year.

The three others, two of them seniors, were placed on conduct probation. This means the student is sent home to report to his parents before being allowed to return to school. Longley said the four were members of a 40-student parking group employed at the University lots during football games at Franklin Field and basketball events at the Palestra.

The dean said the four kept some of the parking fees they collected. He described the amount as "not too large."

The students were not identified.

YAF Urges Halt Of Wheat Sale

LEVITTOWN, Pa. (UPI)—The Pennsylvania chapter of Young Americans for Freedom YAF urged President Johnson last week to break off wheat sales to Russia in retaliation for the killing of three Air Force officers whose plane strayed over East Germany.

A. M. Wandling, chairman of the state chapter, urged members to send telegrams to the White House in support of the YAF proposal.

"When Americans are killed in cold blood by the Russians it is against the best interests of this country to aid the Soviet Union under such plans as the sale of wheat," Wandling said.

HARRISBURG (AP) — The 28th Infantry Division, Pennsylvania Army National Guard, will undergo its annual two weeks' summer training July 11-25 at Camps A. P. Hill and Pickett, Virginia. It was announced here Friday night by Maj. Gen. Henry Fluck, division commander.

Truax Talks Up Unpledged Unit

HARRISBURG (AP) — Republican State Chairman Craig Truax stressed Friday the GOP organization position is to seek to have an uncommitted delegation go to the San Francisco national convention in July. "Our position is we are better off — we prefer to have the Pennsylvania delegation go uncommitted," said Truax.

He made the comment when asked about a published report that the Republican organization would not back three western Pennsylvania supporters of presidential aspirant Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., for positions as delegates.

Harris Poll

Catholic Majority Hopes For Contraceptive Okay

By Louis Harris
By better than 3 to 2, the rank and file of Catholics in the United States say they would like to see their church remove the ban on the use of contraceptive devices.

There appears to be widespread consensus among the American people — including both Catholic and non-Catholic — that modern means of controlling population growth should be employed. The use of artificial birth control devices is legal in every state except Connecticut. However, a survey of a cross-section of married adults over 21 just completed indicates that fully 45% do not use these methods. Among Catholics, as might be expected, non-users are even more numerous—65%. Yet, better than a third of these Catholic married couples interviewed in this survey admit to using artificial contraceptives today, despite policies of their church forbidding it.

A probability cross-section was asked:

"Right now, Catholics are forbidden by the church from using artificial birth control devices. Would you like to see the Catholic Church decide to allow Catholics to use birth control devices (contraceptives) or would you oppose that?"

Total Public Catholics
Per Cent Per Cent
Should allow 52 49
Not allow 15 32
Not sure 33 19

Only one Catholic married person in every three is in favor of the church continuing its present policy of prohibition of the use of artificial birth control devices. A substantial percentage isn't sure what the policy ought to be, but fully one in two believe a change in the long-standing position of the church should take place.

When probed in depth to find out the reasoning back of these stated views, people tended either to personalize their own situation or to discuss the world-wide problem of overpopulation. One Catholic in every three, for example, reported that they are having difficulty managing to provide the full education, food and health needs of their children today.

The biggest objections to changing policy among Catholics are the belief that the conceiving of children is basically God's will and for a Catholic to violate church precept is to turn one's back on his faith.

When all of the replies in people's own words are added up, here is the pattern of reasoning pro and con on the birth control issue:

On Catholic Church Permitting Contraceptive Devices

Total Catholic Public
Per Cent Per Cent
Why Favor Change 52 49
Can't provide for child's needs 17 21
Curb world overpopulation 16 10

Individual should decide, not church 13 6
Family too big now 11 12
Relief families need it 4 4
Many Catholics low income 4 3

Catholics would be freed from sin 3 3
I'm Catholic, want change 2 7
Hard on mother's health 2 4
Make church modern 2 3

Some parents unfit 1 —
Unwanted children wrong 1 1
Why Oppose Change 15 32
Children are God's will 8 15
I'm Catholic, believe in church 3 10
Would be immoral 2 3
Against nature 2 4
Not sure 24 19

NOTE: Percentages add to more than 100% because some people gave more than one reason.

The pattern of present use of contraceptive devices as reported among the total married population compared with married Catholics:

Use Of Contraceptive Devices

Total Catholic Public
Per Cent Per Cent
Use devices 55 33
Don't use 45 65

Discussion of the birth-control issue among Catholics has, of course, been intensifying over the past few years. With the introduction of oral contraceptives for women, some authorities believe the efficiency of artificial birth control has also been increased.

Scott Wants Lid On Baker Hearing

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., said he will ask J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI, to look into the release of information detrimental to a witness in the Senate probe of Robert G. Baker.

Scott said the information was in the form of "raw FBI files." He accused White House aides of making the information available.

A spokesman said the White House had no hand in releasing the information to a columnist who has been attacking the witness, Don B. Reynolds. The Senate Rules Committee is looking for possible conflicts of interests in business activities of Baker, former secretary to the Senate Democrats. He resigned the Senate post Oct. 7.

Intimidation Charge

Scott also charged that an attempt was made to intimidate him by Baker through another person.

In a telephone interview from Scranton Saturday night, Scott said:

"The release of raw FBI files could only have occurred at the instance of some person or persons higher than the FBI in government. I am in agreement with the story in the New York Times that information derogatory to Reynolds was offered to at least three newspapers by White House aides."

Stereo Set

Reynolds has testified that he gave a stereo set to President Johnson, then a senator after selling Johnson $100,000 in insurance.

Johnson at a news conference

he thought the stereo set was a gift from Baker.

Scott said that activity by White House aides to discredit Reynolds' testimony "exceeds any similar impropriety in my memory."

He said:

"I am preparing a letter to director Hoover asking that a thorough investigation be made as to the manner in which this information was released. I have the highest confidence in Hoover and I am sure he will want to know this, too."

Earlier Saturday, Sen. B. Everett Jordan, D-N.C., chairman of the committee investigating Baker's activities, expressed confidence in Reynolds' testimony. Reynolds is a business associate of the former Senate aide.

No Disbelief

Jordan said he saw "no reason to disbelieve the documented testimony by Reynolds" despite stories by newspaper columnist Drew Pearson attacking Reynolds.

Barry Backers In Action In Eastern Pennsylvania

PHILADELPHIA — A campaign to inform the grassroots Republicans of Pennsylvania about presidential candidate Senator Barry Goldwater's stand on critical issues of the day, and to provide operating bases in both ends of the state, began this weekend.

The first step was opening of a fully manned headquarters for the Goldwater-for-President Effort for Eastern Pennsylvania, at 1015 Commercial Trust Bldg., in Philadelphia.

This was done by Robert C. Landon, manager of industrial relations for Rohm & Haas, and a group of professional, business, and young people long interested in the Goldwater campaign.

It will be a communications center for all Eastern Pennsylvania counties, and will correlate their activities.

The second development was the immediate surge of pro-Goldwater volunteers who offered their services in promoting local meetings and home coffee klatches at which Goldwater information and the Senator's position upon Cuba, T.V.A., the graduated income tax provision, and an adequate and flexible air defense would be set forth.

Mr. Landon emphasized that Senator Goldwater's campaign would be conducted concurrently with that of the Western District, headquartered in Pittsburgh, where Bennett S. Chapelle, Jr., administrative vice-president of the U.S. Steel Corp., is chairman.

He has been asked to head the Statewide Goldwater-for-President Effort, and is in touch with conservative Republican elements who feel the Arizona leader has the best chance to be elected, if nominated.

At the opening of the Philadelphia headquarters, Mr. Landon stated the Goldwater Committee's objectives as three fold:

1. To inform the grassroots Republicans of Pennsylvania about presidential candidate Senator Barry Goldwater's stand on critical issues of the day, and to provide operating bases in both ends of the state, began this weekend.

indicate the single county plan would receive the required support.

The county must reorganize its school districts by 1966, under provisions of the new school reorganization bill passed during the 1963 session of the state legislature.

Eastburg Action
The switch in sentiment favoring a countywide plan stems from recent endorsement of the single county unit by the East Stroudsburg Borough School Board.

This action puts Bunnell, president of the county board and a member of the East Stroudsburg school board, behind the move for a county unit.

Blakeslee, Pleasant Valley Joint School District representative and the only board member to vote for a county unit when the board voted to reorganize the county into four districts in November, said:

"I will make a motion at the meeting calling for the county board to adopt a plan that will reorganize all county schools into a single unit."

Bunnell said he will definitely second such a motion.

PM For 4 Districts
At present the only definite vote will come from Dr. Edmund Magann, county board member from the Pocono Mountain joint district.

Seven out of the eight districts in the mountain jointure have voted in favor of a four-district plan. The Pocono Township School Board is the lone holdout against the four-district proposal.

The county board's two other members, John Baymor of the Stroud Union School District, and David Hutchinson of the East Stroudsburg Area Joint School District, are uncommitted.

However, Baymor has indicated he thinks a countywide plan will be the one that will be adopted by the county board.

Hutchinson "Listening" to listen to both sides of the argument. "I will not be seriously disappointed at whatever way the county board chooses to go," he said.

Baymor said, "I would like to see the four-district plan but I don't think it is possible with expression the way it is."

He said he does not see how the four-district plan has a chance of approval by the State Dept. of Public Instruction (DPI) if Eldred Township is successful in its bid to join the Palmerton School district.

The new school reorganization act states county school districts can reorganize in any way they see fit as long as none of the proposed districts contain any fewer units or any units with a smaller pupil population than contained in the county's last plan for reorganization.

In the 1961 county plan Eldred was included in the Pleasant Valley district and its exclusion in any proposed plan to keep Pleasant Valley a single school district may be rejected by the state.

All county board members are convinced the DPI would rather see the county reorganized into a single unit than into four separate administrative units.

Dr. Herbert Bryan, chief of school district reorganization for the DPI, told county school officials that he "was disappointed at the county board's plan calling for four districts."

THAT PLACE with the impossible Long Name, Wales (AP) — Unknown miscreants stole the nameplate of the village railroad station—with all of its 60 letters.

Llanfairpwllgwyngyll, gogerychwyrndrobwl llanfairpwllgogoch, that is.

The nameplate is 20 feet long and made of metal. The thieves sawed it loose from its supporting posts and were off into the darkness before you could say anti-establishmentarianism.

This makes the natives — all 344 of them—laugh like crazy. They call the place Llanfair P. G. for short.

Results have not been received of tests on samples of food used at Pocmont during the time the people became ill, according to Shoemaker.

David Artzt, Pocmont owner, said last night the lodge has been filled every weekend since the incident and no one has complained of being ill.

On Friday, Jan. 24, 63 students from Lakewood, N. J., who spent the day at Pocmont, were stricken ill on buses on their trip home. All the affected students required medical treatment.

Another 10 guests at the lodge over that weekend complained of being ill at various times during their stay.

Shoemaker said it is unlikely that the exact cause of the illness can be determined by the testing done by the health department.

STROUDSBURG — Stroud Union High School has been notified by John M. Stalnaker, president of the National Merit Scholarship Corp., that Barbara J. Kimball and Gregory A. Gumm are now finalists in the program.

As semi-finalists Miss Kimball and Gumm took college entrance aptitude tests in December.

Their scores on these examinations confirmed their high scores on the National Merit Scholarship examinations, given in the spring of 1963, and they now belong to a group of some 13,000 students from whom the 1964 merit scholars will be selected. The actual selection process is now under way.

Small, Davis, Mullins Shun Race For State Assembly

STROUDSBURG — Three Monroe County men last night denied rumors that they are seeking the Republican nomination for state representative, while a fourth said he had "no comment at this time."

Saying definitely that they would not seek political office in the April 28 primary election were Joseph Small, Stroudsburg mayor, John H. Davis, Mt. Pocono fuel oil distributor, and John C. Mullins, Stroudsburg insurance broker.

Gerald Snyder, an East Stroudsburg resident and New Jersey school teacher, said he had no comment to make on the possibility of his candidacy.

However, several Republican leaders said there is a strong possibility Snyder will seek nomination to the post now held by Van D. Yetter, Marshalls Creek Democrat.

Yetter is the only announced Democratic nominee for state representative.

Snyder was the 1962 Republican nominee and was beaten by Yetter in the general election.

Mayor Small said, "I definitely will not run for public office this term. As for the future, I am undecided."

STROUDSBURG — Rodnette Restaurant at 507 Main St., Stroudsburg, was burglarized sometime Saturday night.

According to Gladys Slack, owner of the establishment, entrance was gained through a small window on the west side of the building.

The owner told police this morning that only a few cigars were taken.

Cathedral High Of Scranton Wins Pocono Mountain Debate

SWIFTWATER — Cathedral High School of Scranton won the second annual Pocono Mountain Debate Tournament Saturday in the Pocono Mountain Joint High School in Swiftwater.

The event attracted 28 high school debating teams from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, with more than 200 students taking part.

South Catholic High School from Scranton won second place and Marywood Seminary from Dunmore placed third.

A. J. Caprioli, Pocono Mountain debating coach, directed a group of 50 Pocono Mountain students putting on the tournament. The debaters were served lunch in the school cafeteria.

Debating in the tournament for Pocono Mountain were Richard Zappel, Elizabeth Serfass, Daniel Chalmers and Mark Tingel. They placed 14th.

Their scores on these examinations confirmed their high scores on the National Merit Scholarship examinations, given in the spring of 1963, and they now belong to a group of some 13,000 students from whom the 1964 merit scholars will be selected. The actual selection process is now under way.

GOP Rights Support

The success of the civil rights bill in the U. S. House of Representatives last week was surprising.

Only minor changes were made as 65 of 93 amendments offered by foes of the civil rights legislation were defeated. Only one major change was included in the 28 amendments adopted—an extension of the ban against discrimination in hiring to discrimination against women.

The 2-1 majority by which the legislation was defeated again and again on the floor of the House was made possible by an unusual coalition of Democrats and Republicans from almost every state outside of the South.

The easy victories of the civil rights bill would not have been won without Republican support which is essential to the Democratic leadership in Congress.

Because the Southerners, mostly Democrats, deserted their party on civil rights issue, the Democratic leaders needed heavy Republican support.

They got it, first in the Rules Committee, where Republicans made possible the majority vote which brought the bill out of committee over the objections of its powerful chairman, Rep. Howard W. Smith of Virginia, a Democrat.

Republicans stuck to their position in the floor fight and helped the bill to victory.

They should be commended for their stand, although many know they would have been condemned at the polls if they had opposed the strongest civil rights bill in the history of Congress.

The Republican party will be called upon again in the Senate to provide the necessary margin of victory against tougher opposition.

The Senate Southern filibuster is expected to be a long and bitter fight, in contrast to the calm and statesmanlike arguments in the House this week.

The Republican Party will again be able to prove that its conservative wing does not control policy on this vital national issue.

The Romantic Crisis

We who enjoy the democracy of the United States are amused by the "political crisis" caused in the Netherlands by Princess Irene who chose "love and life abroad" and renounced her rights to the throne.

She was told bluntly by the political leaders of her little nation that they would quit if she marries the Spanish sportsman she loves.

Prince Carlos de Bourbon y Parma, the 33-year-old aviator and parachutist the princess wants to marry, is not only a Catholic.

He is also a pretender to the Spanish throne and is indirectly associated with Francisco Franco, the dictator of Spain who is not popular in the Netherlands.

The Dutch constitution forbids any member of the royal family to engage in "foreign politics"—Dutch political leaders interpret the proposed marriage as an involvement in "foreign politics."

Beyond that, Princess Irene has been converted to Catholicism, apparently under the influence of Prince Carlos. This is not popular in the Netherlands, where the royal family is traditionally Protestant.

In addition, the Protestant people of the Netherlands fought during the 16th and 17th century to free themselves from Spanish Catholic rule.

All these factors created the weekend crisis in the Hague which was solved only when Princess Irene renounced her royal rights, which include an annual grant of $35,000.

It appears somewhat like a tempest in a teapot on this side of the Atlantic where monarchs never sat. But the Dutch took the crisis very seriously.

Panama Troubles

By Walter Lippmann

It is reasonably certain that there will continue to be trouble in Panama as long as the present canal is the only canal connecting the two oceans. It may be, of course, that some kind of ingenious and sophisticated face-saving accommodation will be worked out and that it will keep the peace until after the Panamanian election in May and our own in November. But the hard fact is that the present canal is complicated, vulnerable and vitally important.

The canal depends on a series of locks which are very vulnerable to sabotage. One ship with a big bomb in it could put the canal out of business for a long time. The canal is an intricate piece of engineering which cannot be operated and guarded by the Panamanians themselves, because they do not have the engineers and the skilled technicians or the soldiers.

Because the canal requires the presence of foreigners to operate it and guard it, there is, inevitably, a foreign colony on the territory of Panama. Because there is a foreign colony, there has to be a treaty defining the rights and powers of the foreign government which the colonists serve.

We are now at odds with the government of Panama over the treaty of 1903. The apparent issue is whether we will "negotiate" a revision of that treaty or whether we will "discuss" a revision. We are standing fast against the proposal to "negotiate" even though the Panamanians say that this would not commit us to accept any specific change in the treaty.

I think we are right on this point, because after a negotiation, if we were faced with a proposal that we believed would endanger the security of the canal, we would be just where we are today.

There is, however, an alternative for us, which would be to make a proposal for a wholly new treaty, based on the principle that our rights in the Canal Zone, which are now "in perpetuity," shall expire X years after the necessary agreements have been reached among the American republics for a new sea-level canal.

There are five possible sites for such a canal, one in Mexico, one in Nicaragua, one in Colombia and two in Panama itself. A sea-level canal would be radically different from the present canal. Though it would require a large United States part in financing and building it, especially if it is to be made by nuclear excavation, the continuing presence of a large body of American technicians and workmen and soldiers would be necessary to operate the canal or to protect it. The sea-level canal would have no locks that could be sabotaged, and it would need no colony of foreigners to keep the machinery in good repair.

It is, moreover, generally acknowledged that the present canal, which is already too small for big naval and merchant ships, will in 10 years or so be too small for the traffic of this hemisphere and of the world. Another canal will have to be built in any event, and there is no reason, it seems to me, why we should not at the same time cut to the root of our quarrel with the Panamanians and provide a public facility of great importance to ourselves and our neighbors.

Assuming that it might take 15 years to build a new sea-level canal, we could offer the Republic of Panama termination of our quasi-sovereignty in the Canal Zone 15 years from the ratification of the necessary agreements to authorize and finance the new canal. Since there would be no practical need to make the new canal a United States enterprise, we could in good conscience propose that the canal be operated under an authority representing the American republics.

Sir Alec Guinness sat listening patiently while a comatose dined through a long, pointless story. To make matters worse, he mumbled so that only one word out of three was intelligible. Nevertheless, when he completed his tale, Sir Alec laughed long and loud. He explained later, "I always do. If you don't laugh, the bloody horses usually tell the story all over again."

An after-dinner speaker had droned on endlessly. "After partaking of this evening's superb repast," he continued, "I feel that if I had had one single bite more, I would be unable to say a word." From the rear end of the room came an order to the waiter, "Bring him a sandwich quick!"

The Pennsylvania Story

Scranton Unconcern

By Mason Denison

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvanians outside the big cities of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh apparently can go fly a kite insofar as the Scranton Administration is concerned.

The point was made rather strikingly — and forcefully — the other day when at a press conference Governor Scranton was asked about the Philadelphia traffic ticket racket which has found Pennsylvanians up and down and across the state receiving traffic violation citations from Philadelphia authorities, notwithstanding the fact that the victims were not in the city on the dates cited.

Replied Governor Scranton: "I don't know anything about it."

(On the other hand, ask him about the financial plight of the Philadelphia Board of Education and he can discourse — as he has — at length on the subject.)

As for the plight of thousands of upstate Pennsylvanians, outside of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh: "I don't know anything about it."

Let's look at the record: Since mid-December this daily column on seven different occasions has been concerned exclusively with exposing in detail the Philadelphia traffic ticket racket foisted upon upstate motorists.

Only last month a series of four consecutive columns outlined in detail the operation of the traffic ticket racket, citing instance after instance of specific victims.

The "evidence file" of hiked Pennsylvanians now in possession of this column has reached completely unexpected proportions.

Were this column to appear for example in only one upstate newspaper, the "I don't know anything about it" comment would perhaps be understandable, but — this column does not appear in just one newspaper, not five, not ten, not fifteen, not twenty, not twenty-five, not thirty, not thirty-five, but some forty daily newspapers throughout the state (outside of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh) which are purposely excluded!

Additionally, a number of newspapers throughout the state have editorialized on the subject — one even providing its own cartoon with an editorial.

At this point, for Mr. Scranton "not to know anything about" the traffic-ticket-and-fine racket foisted upon luckless upstate Pennsylvanians is one of the most appalling evidences conceivable of an apparent "public be damned" attitude.

And this is the man Republican colleagues would advance for the presidential nod; the man who must appeal to the "masses" if he ever hopes to overcome the Democratic edge?

This column would suggest that under such circumstances Mr. Scranton need have little worry over the "sincere and honest draft" to which he constantly refers!

Originally this column suggested that an investigation of the traffic-and-fine racket be launched by the executive branch — the administration, via its Department of Justice — to give, in all seeming fairness, the administration the opportunity to act on its own.

However, the Governor's apparent unconcern as evidenced by his lack of knowledge or interest in what goes on in the "rest of the state," plus the Attorney General's refusal to initiate a Department of Justice probe into the "why-for" of the racket in the first place (other than a sit-down chit-chat with Philadelphia officials to "correct" the situation), prompts the recommendation now that the legislative branch take over where the executive branch failed, and initiate its own complete legislative investigation.

Any such probe by the all-powerful legislative branch should not be merely content with just finding a solution to the problem as a protection for "future" violators — but should dig at the heart of the thing to find out "why" and "how" such a preposterous condition could prevail, and just "who" is responsible. The malpractice has been vastly too widespread to be merely "human error," as one Administration official blithely and absurdly referred to it!

Our Draft Withdrawn

There have been reams of copy written about Gov. William W. Scranton's feinting with drafts, near drafts and honest calls from followers to run for the presidency.

The head of Pennsylvania's government, slowly pitched downward with remarks that he would accept "an honest and sincere draft" to a quote that he would attempt to "head off an honest and sincere draft."

All along the way we wondered why a man of Scranton's stature and obvious know-how would rather be carried — so to speak — into the highest office in the land.

The other night we worried so much about the governor's feelings that we decided to call the Associated Press in Philadelphia and see if they could get a reporter on Scranton's tail and ask him: "Why does he not want to be president?"

We had been reading countless newspapers and stories from the AP and United Press International, but no one ever posed this question.

For the sake of curiosity we couldn't fathom any man not wanting the greatest post in the world. After — all every kid who

The Allen-Scott Report

Robert S. Allen

President Johnson resorted to a suave end-run to line up powerful bipartisan congressional support for his controversial plan to give the Pentagon control of his proposed $1 billion foreign military aid budget — but was thrown for a heavy loss.

Most of the legislative leaders bluntly assailed the proposal, and made it ominously clear they would fight it to the end if he goes through with it. Some went so far as to warn it would jeopardize the whole foreign aid program.

Apparently on the theory that a bountiful and appetizing meal would soften them up, the President gave a dinner for members of the Senate and House foreign affairs committees, and Senator Richard Russell, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, and Representative Otto Passman, D-La., head of the House Appropriations subcommittee that handles the foreign aid budget.

Also present at this unpublished affair were Defense Secretary McNamara, Undersecretary of State George Ball, and David Bell, foreign aid administrator.

McNamara and Ball opened the proceedings with carefully prepared expositions in favor of the military aid shift to the Pentagon. Their arguments were an old story to the lawmakers. Then the President called on Senator J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, who also urged the proposal.

Up to this point, the well-greased proceedings were obviously prearranged. But what happened next clearly was not — and was a most painful surprise to the President and his lieutenants.

Representative Thomas Morgan, D-Pa., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and usually a down-the-line administration backer, unexpectedly kicked over the traces. Pleasantly but firmly, he declared the President's proposal was unacceptable and he wanted no part of it.

"I can tell you right now that neither my committee nor the House will stand for it," said Morgan. "I know that a majority of my committee is strongly against such a scheme, and I'm certain a big majority of the House is, too. In fact, if you should be so unwise as to try to put this over, that majority very well lead to defeat of the whole foreign aid program."

With this bombshell still reverberating, the President called on Representative Wayne Hays, D-O., who was even more scathing. The acid-tongued midwesterner took a lusty swipe at both the President's plan and Senator Fulbright.

"The distinguished chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee," said Hays, "has to run only every six years, while we members of the House have to go to the electorate every two years. That makes a big difference, especially when the voters of Arkansas are not much interested in foreign affairs. But I can tell you that the people of Ohio are intensely interested and well informed, particularly regarding foreign aid."

"I have no intention of running on a record that calls for turning over a major part of foreign aid to the military. Aside from all other factors against that, to do so would be political suicide."

Representative Passman, long-time militant critic of large-scale foreign aid spending, ran true to form despite the President's hospitality. Passman announced he was unalterably opposed to the President's proposal, and would do everything in his power to defeat it.

"This makes me more determined than ever before to minutely scrutinize every item of the foreign aid budget," declared Passman. "Last year we did our utmost to do that, and we're going to redouble our efforts this year. This proposition is wholly unacceptable. Congress will not approve it, and you will be making a very serious mistake if you try to put it through."

Dear Abby

Unbelievably True

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This may sound like a silly problem, but it is very serious to me. My husband travels a lot and I am terrified to stay alone at night, so he gets me a room at a motel while he is gone. I get all upset several days before he leaves and I'm unbearable to live with. I realize how stupid this is, and we really can't afford the extra expense, but I just can't help myself. I am so ashamed of my problem that I don't tell people about it. When my neighbors see me coming home the next morning, I can imagine what they must think. What should I tell them when they ask me where I was the night before?

A FRAID

DEAR ABBY: Tell them you spent the night at a motel. They'll never believe it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a teenage girl who figured something out that might help parents. When a girl goes on a date with a boy she likes pretty well, she usually gives him a goodnight kiss. In order to discourage this (I guess) most parents leave the porch light burning. Most kids, not wishing to put on a show for the whole neighborhood, take the hint. But they soon take to saying their goodnights in a parked car on a back road, parents leave the porch light their daughters from a tender goodnight kiss at the door may unknowingly be encouraging a wrestling match in a parked car. Thank you.

A GIRL WHO KNOWS

DEAR GIRL: A brute who would wrestle a girl for a kiss in a parked car is not about to settle for a "tender goodnight kiss" at the door. The porch light should be on until every one who's OUT is IN. And the place for a goodnight kiss is IN the house.

DEAR ABBY: May I add something to your answer to the sixth-grader who was ashamed of his mother because she had a foreign accent? Every American, except the American Indian, descended from foreigners. But foreigners brought more to our shores than an accent. They brought knowledge, ambition and talent. These are the things that made America great. Don't be ashamed of Mom because your teacher asks her to repeat something. Teachers are used to that. I also want to assure you that your "good looking" American father knows your mother from way back, and he is used to her English by now. A person who can communicate in a language other than his own (no matter how broken) is working toward a better understanding. And understanding only shall lead us to the peace that we are all praying for. Abby, no matter how tired I am, I always find time for your column. Please reciprocate and find space for my letter.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FEELING NO PAIN" IN ITHACA: WAIT!

Speaking Of Your Health:

Guard Against Frostbite

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

There is a tendency to minimize the importance of frostbite. Yet this unhappy result of overexposure to freezing temperatures can produce serious injury.

Simple precautions and the recognition of early symptoms of frostbite can prevent long and painful periods of unnecessary illness and incapacitation.

The very first sign of frostbite is usually a persistent "pins and needles" sensation of the tips of the fingers, the toes, the ear lobes or the nose. Numbness and skin pallor next become noticeable. Strangely, the pale, blanched skin later turns a bluish-red.

Frostbite is preventable. Warm clothing (preferably in several layers), warm, dry, insulated socks and gloves, and waterproof shoes should be worn by anyone who must be subjected to severely cold temperatures. Clothing and shoes should not be so tight that they restrict circulation.

Good Suggestion

An excellent suggestion for motorists is to carry an extra supply of heavy clothing and warm overcoats in their automobiles, should "hiking" to a garage for assistance become necessary.

If you suspect that someone has frostbite, bring them indoors to a warm room. Do not rub or massage too vigorously the frozen part of the body. Gentle thawing is recommended. This can be done by immersing the frost-bitten area in tepid or cool water.

Ice or snow should not be applied to the frozen arm or leg. It merely interferes with the important thawing-out process. Remember, too, that a frost-bitten leg or arm is less sensitive than a normal one. Bathing it with hot water can cause severe burns.

Prompt medical attention with antibiotics, anticoagulants and other drugs, under the supervision of a doctor, can prevent infection, which is sometimes a complication of frostbite.

Preparation for cold weather and the prevention of frostbite does not take exacting judgment. Rather does it need the sensible anticipation of temperature changes that can spell the difference between comfort and possible danger to life and limb.

WATCH THOSE LABELS According to a report given at the National Safety Council Congress, "Chemical hazards that have long harassed industry have invaded homes, farms and highways, where they represent a health problem of major importance."

Mrs. Marion Gleason of the University of Rochester, Rochester, New York, called attention to the fact that industry protects its workers through industrial hygienists and safety engineers. Unlike these precautions in industry, too many home do-it-yourselfers disregard the specific instructions on labels for safety.

Toxic chemicals may be overlooked as the cause of "drowsiness, dizziness, lack of coordination and impaired vision" by those who carelessly reject the safety precautions advised by manufacturers.

Stories Behind Words

William S. Penfield

Paper

"Paper" got its name from an Egyptian water plant.

The Egyptians learned several thousand years ago that by using the fibers of a certain reed they could make a material which provided a good writing surface.

They split the stems and removed the thin inner fiber which they laid out side by side on a flat surface. They laid other strips on top of and at right angles to these. Then they pasted the two sheets together, forming a smooth writing surface.

The name of this product was called "papyrus" from the name of the plant from which it was made. The name passed through Greek, Latin and French and entered the English language as "paper."

30 Years Of Frustration At Mt. Pocono Airport

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of articles on the Pocono Mountains Airport in Mount Pocono — its purposes, troubles, and future.)

By Jeff Cox

Daily Record Reporter

In the mid-1930s, the great stretch of mountains and woods from Stroudsburg north was a graveyard for airplanes in distress.

When disaster struck, pilots had nowhere to go but into the trees, usually to their death.

The federal and state governments decided that there should be an emergency landing strip somewhere in Northeastern Pennsylvania. The present site of the Pocono Mountains Airport was chosen, and work on the field began in 1935.

30 Years Old

It's now 1964, almost 30 years later, and the field still has no permanent buildings. It is little more than a modern highway, too small to accommodate commercial airliners, unable to handle planes.

What went on in the intervening years is a study in frustration — too little money, too late.

From 1935 until 1949, little was thought about the 3,300-foot grass runway and the 2,700-foot paved runway stuck high on a hill near Mount Pocono.

But in 1949, All-American Airways, now Allegheny Airlines, decided it wanted to schedule regular commercial air service to Mount Pocono. The airline said it needed a 3,600-foot paved runway to bring passengers, freight, and mail service to the Poconos.

Bought For $1

The state said it would sell the airport property to a municipal airport authority for $1 if one would be set up, and that federal grants could be obtained.

The authority was formed by the borough of Mount Pocono, and the townships of Barrett, Paradise, Pocono, and Tobyhanna.

All-American Airlines was granted permission to operate commercial air service to the airport.

A one-half mill tax was levied on the participating municipalities in 1951, based on property values at that time.

Too Little Money

Plans were formulated, engineers were consulted, but there was too little money. The authority waited, tried to collect more funds, but years passed with no construction.

Allegheny Airlines retained its certification until 1953, then let it lapse because progress was too slow.

By 1958, there was finally enough money to start the project, but the cost had swelled to $400,000.

By 1961, it was finished . . . the airport had a 4,000-foot main runway, paved and fully-lit during the night, another paved runway 2,600-feet long but not lit, a pilot advisory setup, giving weather, runway conditions, and local air traffic, a well-lit taxi-way, a beacon, a lighted windsock, and Standard Oil installed $12,000 worth of gasoline pumps free of charge.

Authority In Debt

But it was still too small for commercial airliners, and the Airport Authority was in debt up to its ears.

Estimated cost of extending the runway to the 5,400 feet required by today's airliners is $250,000. The net local cost of this would be $62,500. Federal aid would pay half the cost, state aid a quarter and local funds a quarter.

The Airport Authority has stated that if a third of a mill tax were levied on all the townships and boroughs in the county that do not now contribute, the runways could be extended, hangars could be built, and some sort of terminal could be erected.

But that's not the case — as yet.

Last year total authority receipts were $15,077, of which $10,000 was from the County Commissioners. Meanwhile, the authority owes a note from a bank totalling $36,171.

Hands Tied

Without enough funds the Airport Authority had its hands tied. It could not build without added revenue.

Then along came Aero-Med, Inc., of Salisbury, Md., in the person of John McCullough, its owner, with a plan to lease the airport — or at least 7,000 square feet of it — for 10 years.

It seemed that the airport would finally take shape. McCullough said, at the April 12, 1963 signing of the lease, that he would erect a hangar and service facilities, office space and sanitary facilities, all in one building 115 by 60 feet within 60 days.

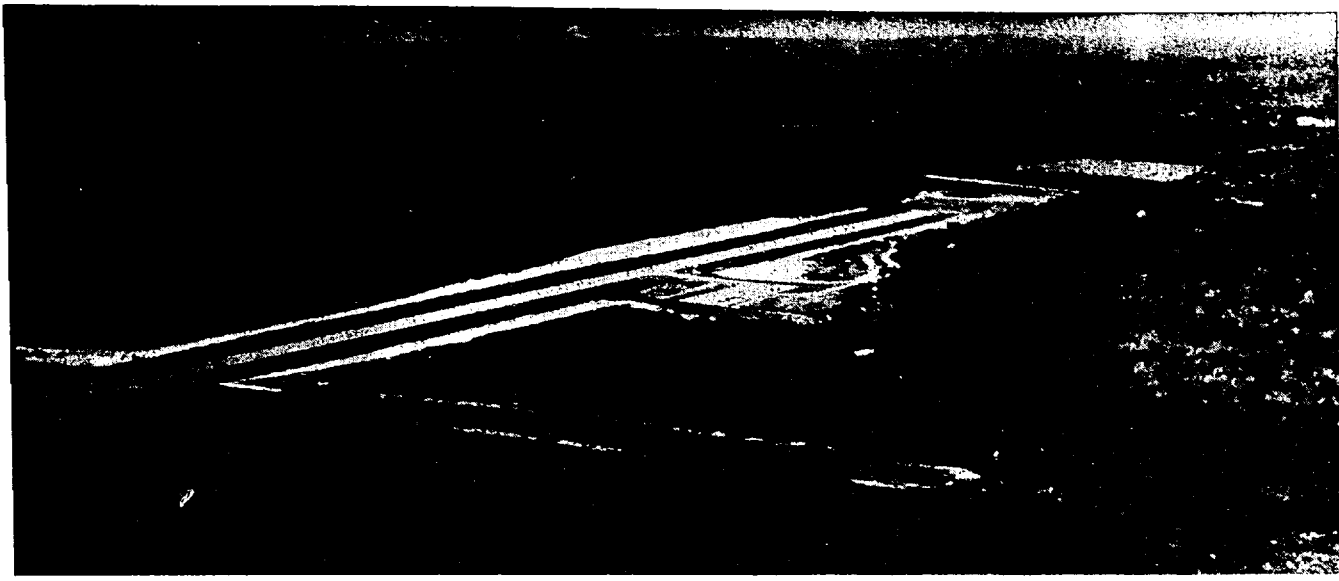

Aero-Med was also to give the airport authority three and a half per cent of the gross receipts of its operation, and run the airport without cost to the authority.

It's now about 302 days since that statement was made, and four bleak walls, with no roof and no equipment, stand at the edge of the wind-swept runway.

Karl Weiler, Barrett Township authority member, said at the time of the signing, "This is the biggest thing to happen to the airport since it began."

His enthusiasm was understandable, but like so many other grand plans for the "modern highway" of Mount Pocono, it has so far failed to materialize.

Dr. Stearns Reports On Allergies

SAN FRANCISCO — Dr. Perry S. Stearns of Stroudsburg is one of three doctors who today presented to The American Academy of Allergy a Pennsylvania pattern for establishing allergy services in rural areas.

"An innovation in Allergy Services for Rural Areas" was the title of the 10-minute paper presented at the academy's 20th annual meeting by Dr. Stearns and Doctors Leonard W. Parkhurst and Fred Mac D. Richardson, both of Philadelphia.

The three physicians reported their experiences in establishing an allergy service at a clinic in Monroe County.

Under a grant from The John A. Hartford Foundation, a consulting allergist from Pennsylvania Hospital visited the local clinic to teach the medical staff the basic principles of diagnosing and treating allergies.

In effect, the project helped Monroe County's physicians apply the latest medical advances in treating their local allergy patients.

"The procedure described has provided patient services previously lacking within an area of a 40-mile radius from the clinic," the authors reported, "and with a population approaching 100,000."

The paper by Dr. Stearns and his colleagues was one of 62 selected for presentation during the Academy's three-day scientific session ending Wednesday (at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel).

More than 800 allergists from the United States, Canada and a number of foreign nations are attending the annual meeting.

Based on the results of their Monroe County experiment, the doctors reported that the establishment of similar clinics in other rural areas "would result in more effective dissemination of general knowledge concerning allergic states, in more rapid transfer of new knowledge from the research laboratory to the actual care of patients, and in increasing the service to society presently provided by physicians . . ."

Clark Asks River Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., has called for a thorough federal-state study of "the pernicious problem" of acid mine water pollution in the Susquehanna River Basin.

In a statement submitted to the Army Engineers in connection with their study of the basin, Clark suggested the construction of reservoirs to contain acid water and control its release downstream.

He also called on the engineers to direct their "urgent attention" to low water flow in the river, water supply, flood control, recreation and fish and wildlife.

The possibilities of future economic development in the Susquehanna Basin are superb," Clark said, "but doomed to failure unless we correct some of the basic problems holding back progress in the region."

Clark said more than 2,000 miles of waterways in Pennsylvania are polluted with acid mine drainage and the largest share is in the Susquehanna Basin.

Clark said the upper reaches of the river's West Branch, North Branch and the Juniata River offer some of the best potential for recreational development in the United States.

Beware Busy People-Watchers

By Roberta Fleming Roesch
Too often we find ourselves listening to self-employed people watch!

But unless your boss has asked you to people-watch everyone else, you'll do a whole lot better to mind your own business instead.

Friction Develops
The friction you cause in an office by spying on employees can mean more trouble than if you left things entirely up to your boss.

And, besides, your boss may already know the tidbits you want to share!
So when you're inclined to people-watch, don't be one of these:

TYPE I—a middle-aged clerk who works in an office book-keeping department. She admits that she's oldest than most of the girls and their antics are driving her crazy.

"There's one girl in particular who needs to be checked on," she says.
"For example, she's late every morning and first to leave every night. Then, in between, she tries to goof off just as much as she can. Besides this, she ties up the office phones for strictly private business."

"Somebody ought to report her, and I'm tempted to be the one!"

TYPE II—girl who minds the money business of others.
"That girl makes exactly what I do," she'll say, without being asked. "So what's she doing with a car that's too expensive for her? And where does she get the extra cash to buy those high style clothes?"

"Some day I'm going to ask her how she gets off that way!"

TYPE III—one who thinks that personal lives also belong to the office.

"Mary can never stay overtime," this people-watcher will say, "and sometimes I think she's up to no good the way she has to run home. How do we know where she goes after work? She never tells anyone!"

"For the sake of the office, however, I think the boss ought to know."

Self-Appointed Duty
And so it goes—ad infinitum—in the people-watching game, among the people who think it's their job to mind everybody's business.

But the fact to remember—and remember again—is that it isn't your job, unless you're in full charge yourself or appointed by the boss.
Except for such occasions as these, your only job is to people-watch yourself!

(If you'd like to receive the pamphlet, "Pointers to Good Personal Relations," send me your request and a long, self-addressed envelope with U. S. postage in care of this newspaper.)

Always Late

U.S. Ski Jumping Disappointing

1964 Olympic Flame Dies
With Russia Team Champs

By TED SMITH
INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)—Toralf Engan of Norway sailed through the air like a giant bird and won the final gold medal in the pulsating 60-meter ski jump Sunday before the flame flickered out on the ninth Winter Olympic Games.

A crowd of 70,000, the largest for any single event, swarmed over Bergisel Hill to watch the 143-pound package of graceful skill and cold nerve reestablish himself as king of the jumpers.

The sandy-haired, 27-year-old equipment dealer from the little village of Holanda did it with superb leaps of 307 and 297 feet—the best two of three tries—and such style that he received a score of 230.70 points from the five judges.

Ski jumping championships are decided on a combination of both distance and form. Engan proved himself the master of both.

The famed Veikko Kankkonen of Finland, winner of the 70-meter jump, captured the second place silver medal with leaps of 313 and 297 feet and 228.50 points. Torgel Brandtzaeg of Norway was third with jumps of 302 and 295 feet and 227.50 points.

The four-man U.S. team was unable to crack the strong Scandinavian and North European domination of this neck-risking specialty.

Gene Kottlarek, 23-year-old accountant from Duluth, Minn., made the best American showing by placing 24th in the field of 52 jumpers from 16 nations. His two best jumps measured 283 and 266 feet. He scored 197.50 points.

Dave Hicks, 18-year-old school boy also from Duluth, was 29th on jumps of 279 and 276 feet for 155.30 points. The veteran of the squad, 34-year-old Ansten Samuelstuen of Boulder, Colo., was 33rd with leaps of 267 and 264 for 159.00. John Balfanz, 23, of Minneapolis, rated America's best bet, was a disappointment, finishing 41st on jumps of 272 and 241 feet for 160.20 points.

Norway's 15th Engan's gold medal was the 15th medal for Norway—three gold, six silver and six bronze—and made it the second most successful competitor behind the Soviet Union, which won the unofficial team title with 25 medals, 11 of them gold.

Seven of the Soviet gold medals were picked up by two lady schoolteachers—speed skater Lidia Skoblikova, who won four in an unprecedented slam, and Claudia Boyarskikh, who grabbed three in cross country skiing.

After a frustrating start, the United States closed on a high note when a pair of 20-year-olds, Billy Kidd of Stowe, Vt., and Jim Houga of Tahoe City, Calif., won the silver and bronze in Saturday's men's slalom, the first ever taken by U.S. men skiers in the Winter Games.

Medals—making a U.S. total of six—also were won by Jean Saubert of Lakeview, Ore., a silver and bronze in the ladies' giant slalom and slalom; schoolboy Scott Etkan Allen of Smoke Rise, N.J., a bronze in the men's figure skating; and harbor Terry McDermott of Essexville, Mich., a gold in the men's 500 meter speed skating.

Winds lathered the 90-meter jump was staged in sub-freezing temperatures with gusty winds that threw many of the competitors off balance in flight and caused them to fall.

Just before the brief and colorful closing ceremonies at the Ice Stadium, where athletes gathered to see the flame extinguished for another four years, Poland won the consolation round robin in hockey by beating Austria 5-1. Norway finished second, walloping Yugoslavia 8-4, and Japan fell to third, losing to Italy 8-6.

The Soviet Union won the championship tournament with a perfect 7-0 record, eliminated by a 3-2 triumph over Canada Saturday. The United States finished fifth.

A FLIPPED FLOP—Bob Conklin of East Stroudsburg State watches the pool lights go by as he starts to throw his head back toward the water. He dove in Saturday's meet with West Chester, which the Warrior men lost, 63-32.

'Black Saturday' Returns
As 4 Top Cage Teams Lose

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

February and Black Saturdays seem to go together in college basketball.

Wichita, Villanova, Chicago Loyola and DePaul, four of the nation's Top Ten teams, took it on the chin in the Black Saturday of the 1964 season to date.

Top-ranked UCLA and Vanderbilt barely escaped disaster.

By a curious coincidence a year ago, six of the Top Ten in The Associated Press rankings were defeated.

UCLA, now the only major unbeaten team, scored its 10th straight victory, a 58-56 squeaker over California helped by Keith Erickson's three-point play in the closing minutes.

Eighty-ranked Vanderbilt had a similar scare against Louisiana State before winning 66-64 on Clyde Lee's tip-in at the final buzzer.

The Warriors will try again against Shipensburg Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. at home. Shipensburg has a 6-3 record in league competition.

Wichita Beaten

Wichita, which had a 10-game streak going, suffered its first defeat in Missouri Valley Conference competition when Leon Hill's one-handed 18-foot shot in the last second gave Bradley a 76-74 victory over the fourth-ranked Wheatshockers.

Villanova, No. 6 in the AP rankings, had its 13-game winning streak shattered by LaSalle 63-59 when Frank Corace's long shot in the last 90 seconds put the Explorers ahead for good at 50-55.

Chicago Loyola, the national champions and ranked No. 9, lost to St. John's N.Y. 71-69 on two free throws by Billy Lawrence with seven seconds left. Tenth-ranked DePaul took a 68-67 drubbing from Memphis State.

Second-ranked Michigan, No. 3 Kentucky and No. 7 Duke won easily. Michigan whipped Illinois 93-82 as Bill Bunlin and Cazzie Russell combined for 65 points. Kentucky trampled Mississippi 102-59 for Coach Adolph Rupp's 701st career victory.

Duke crushed Maryland 104-72 for the Blue Devils' 27th straight in Atlantic Coast Conference competition. Fifteenth-ranked Davidson was idle.

Oregon State upped its record to 20-3 by whipping Portland 95-61. Utah nipped Brigham Young 91-89 in overtime, and Texas Western edged New Mexico 62-60.

Leader

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bob Pettit, who became a superstar in the National Basketball Association by "playing every game as hard as I can play," became the league's all-time scoring leader Saturday night.

"This has been the only game I ever set for myself in basketball," said Pettit, in his 10th year with the St. Louis Hawks.

The 31-year-old Pettit achieved it with 18 points against San Francisco here. That gave him 12,215, six more than Dolph Schayes of the old Syracuse Nats, now player-coach of the Philadelphia 76ers.

Schayes scored six points in Saturday's Philadelphia-Los Angeles game for a total of 19,209.

YMCA Cagers

Down Bixlers

STROUDSBURG—The YMCA five blasted Bixler's Hardware, 112-43, Saturday at the Monroe County YMCA.

This was the first game in the 'Y' League with over 100 points this year.

Contributing heavily to the YMCA total were Muller with 33 points, Davies with 17, Benzion with 13, Bradley with 10, Burnett with 19 and Pugh with 10.

Francis scored 27 points for Bixler's, over half its point production.

Northampton AFL-CIO Backs Rooney

EASTON — U.S. Representative Fred B. Rooney, Bethlehem Democrat seeking a full term in Congress, has received the unanimous backing of the AFL-CIO Northampton County Industrial Union Council.

In a statement endorsing Rooney's candidacy in the April 28 primary election, Joseph Altman, chairman of the council's committee on political education (COPE), said Rooney knows local problems better than anyone else.

"He has shown the qualifications of leadership and humanitarianism to give the people of the 15th District forceful and effective representation," said Altman.

The council commended Rooney for his efforts in behalf of a stronger anti-dumping bill to prevent flooding of U.S. markets with cheap goods made with cheap labor.
